

Documentary Photography	Human Condition	War Stories	Canada	USA	UK
Fine Art Photography	Women	Society	Mental Illness	Medical	Central America
Street Photography	LGBTIQ	Gender & Sexuality	Migrations	Way Of Life	India
Portrait Photography	Communities	Elderly	Traditions	Africa	South America
Landscape Photography	Disappearing Cultures		Mexico	Asia	Europe
Night Photography	Ethnic Groups	Intimacy	Performers	South & North Pole	Oceania
Conceptual Photography	Faith	Personal Stories	Rural Life	Labor	Russia
Travel Photography	Poverty	Environment	Animals	Caribbean	Middle East
Architectural Photography	Candid Photography	Places	Tropical Garden Stories
Macro & Micro Photography	Recipes Int'l Flavors	Food	Philosophical Ramblings
Still Life Photography	Urban Photography	Music	Aerial Photography	Movies
Industrial Photography	Underwater Photography	Wet Plate Collodion	DARK	Poetry
Photography Articles	In The Mind Of An Artist	OCCULT	Art	Digital Art
The Life Coaching Series	ART Book Reviews	Short Stories	News Release	HOME
Photography Book Recommendations

Anatolia | 1973

By Edge of Humanity Magazine, March 19, 2021

Documentary Photographer Aydin Cetinbostanoglu is the Edge of Humanity Magazine contributor of this documentary photography. From the project 'Anatolia Diaries'. To see Aydin's body of work, click on any image.

Anatolia Diaries, Approximately 3000 km in Anatolia – 1973
"Years of meeting and understanding Anatolian people"

When I was a senior student in high school, I made some money with the photos I took at school. When the summer vacation started, I wanted to visit Anatolia and take photos. When my mother supported me, I went to one of the workshops that made tents in the market and ordered a backpack from the same fabric. I also made the drawing myself. Back then, there were no shop that sells backpacks like today in the city where I was. In the following years, other friends of mine also used that bag.

By using trains, buses, hitchhiking, anything, I was able to go as far as a village in Eastern Anatolia, by doing about 2800 km. What I went through during that trip were unforgettable memories for me. There were young people returning to Diyarbakir from the university entrance exam in Istanbul on the Sivas train. I shared the same compartment with them. They saw a girl walking in the walking hall. Someone went right after him to speak, and when he came back after a while, I never forget the words he said. "The girl has a ring on her finger." Other friends, "Then he is our sister," they replied. How clean thought and clean people were. Anatolian people were like that in those times.

One night, I am waiting for a train to go to Samsun at Sivas train station. I am the only stranger at that time in train station. A villager approached me and we started talking. After a while, he said, "I want to host you in my village." His village was Sivrialan village, where the minstrel Asik Veysel lived. I politely declined. Looking back years later I realize how big a mistake I made. Who knows what beautiful photos I would take.

I swam in Lake Van, made new friends, and went with one of them to the village of Guzeisu in Van. He was a village doctor. Villagers were making a kind of firewood with straw and cattle dung mixture.

One friend I met there was a village teacher in Nigde Uhukisla. After the summer break, he invited me to his village where he works. It was a new place for me in Central Anatolia. I visited him during the winter season. I watched how difficult conditions they were teaching in single classroom schools. The students of the first five grades were in the same room together. The teacher was teaching and listening to each of them according to their level of education. For a person living in big cities, these were unusual images. These trips created a great empathy in me, maybe they changed my view of life in later years.

Some of the photographs took in these trips place was in my third exhibition in Izmir 1974 and the fourth exhibition in Istanbul Cinematheque 1975.

All images and text © Aydin Cetinbostanoglu

See also:

Stories of the Mankind

By Aydin Cetinbostanoglu

Aydin's Previous Contributions To Edge Of Humanity Magazine

In A Tight Spot | MaeKlong Railway Market, Thailand
History, Daily Life & Food | Chinatown, Bangkok, Thailand
Christian Celebrations | Bulgaria

The Cost Of A Bride – Roma's Traditional Wedding Negotiations
Turkey's Alevi Community

Christian Arab Congregation In Antakya, Turkey
Refugee Stories – The Yazidis In Turkey

Gypsies – Marriage Ceremonies & Their Way Of Life

Other 1970's Moments

Edge of Humanity Magazine is an independent nondiscriminatory platform that has no religious, political, financial, or social affiliations.

We are committed to publishing the human condition, the raw diverse global entanglement, with total impartiality.

Documentary Photography * Fine Art Photography * Street Photography * Portrait Photography * Landscape Photography * Night Photography * Conceptual Photography * Travel Photography * Candid Photography Underwater Photography * Architectural Photography Urban Photography * Art * Digital Art

NO MIDDLEMAN
ART
GALLERY

Mikhail Artukhovich

NO MIDDLEMAN ART GALLERY

Press Release For Artists,
Photographers, Poets & Writers
On Edge of Humanity Magazine

Living Under A Pandemic
COVID-19 | Coronavirus' Days

Support This Small Independent
Magazine

Please

DONATE